Winner of Piano in Another Contest says :
"Delighted with My Piano" — Thanks
Manager for Advice and relates Experiencing her Success — Prospective Candidate Should read what this Disinterested yet Informed Young Woman has to say.

Read the letter printed in this issue. It is from a candidate in a contest conducted by the De Luxe Circulation Increasing Company a while a short while ago. It was with great difficulty and only a persuasion that the writer entered the contest because she feared to occupy too much of her time, but finally she acceded to the wish of many friends and entered. Those friends were good and true and date was sincere in her part of the contest. She left no stone unturned with a constancy that would have put many men to shame she working with but one object in view—to show she was the most perfect candidate. She succeeded and as a result was presented, without one cent to herself, with a $400 piano. Read the letter which she writes, for doubtless it will give new spirit to many candidates who have not given thought they should to the contest. See how it feels to be a winner.

Kemptville, Dec. 1,

Contest Manager,

Napanee Express.

Dear Sir,—Well, I am once more back to my quiet undertone have fully recovered from the "Election." I am more than pleased with my piano; yes, my very own. Now I can heartily appreciate your good reading in the News about my receiving friends until midnight at announced that I had won. It was like three o'clock. Mother and neighbors will think we are giving recitals down at our house, for I isn't let alone one minute while I am in the house. There has been a number of people admiring it, but I think I am the chief admirer.

I wish you every success, and if you ever pass through Kemptville I would be glad to see you.

Yours sincerely,

ELSIE McCLENAGHAN.

This is the way it feels to be a winner of the Newcombe piano contest. Elsie McClenaghan was a very consistent, yet never over enthusiastic candidate, yet she waited not a minute up until the closing hour of the contest. The Contest Manager has told many women just what Miss McClenaghan did, yet they are losing time every day they wait before sending their names in.

Now is the time to enter. If your name is not published in the News, send it to the Contest Department and have your name published in the Express Piano Owning Contest.

Bernard McCall's Body Found

The disappearance of Bernard McCall was solved on Thursday last when his badly decomposed remains were found in the corner of a field leaning against a fence at the back of the Finkle farm near Newburgh. A lad cultivating in a nearby field noticed what he thought was a man leaning against the fence and as the man did not move for a considerable time he secured assistance with the result that on investigation the body was found to be that of Mr. McCall. Mr. McCall was about 23 years of age and was visiting his mother at Camden East while recovering from a severe illness and on the day he disappeared had gone out shooting and his loaded rifle was found by his side. The remains were taken in charge by undertaker Dunwoody, Newburgh. The body was so badly decomposed that little more than the bones remained and it is impossible to say how he came to his death.

KILLED BY FALL FROM POLE.

Thursday afternoon of last week Mr. Clarence Hayes, of Kingston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hayes, Mill street, Napanee, met with a serious accident while at work which resulted in his death on Tuesday. The following information concerning the sad affair is taken from an item which appeared in the Kingston Whig: "Those who were in the neighborhood of the House of Providence, Montreal street, on Thursday afternoon, about 5.15 o'clock, had the unpleasant experience of seeing a man thrown in a backward somersault off a telephone pole from a height of twenty-five feet, and his head dashed against the cement pavement. There were two line men of the Bell Telephone company, Clarence Hayes and Peter Currier, on a pole at Bay street, to which was strung a messenger wire 'fiddle string' to a pole on Princess street, and the other side of which was held by a 'guy' wire. The men were about to descend and had dropped their pole belts. They were thus holding on only with spikes when evidently the 'guy' wire broke, and the pole sprang back like a whip stem, throwing Currier to the ground and sending Hayes into the air backwards. Currier lit on a plot of grass and is suffering from two broken ribs, the other man, however, struck head first on the cement walk and is suffering from a fractured skull. Both men were taken to the Hotel Dieu by Corbett's ambulance, and were attended by Drs. Ross, Hanley, and McCarthy. Mr. Hayes, who was injured so badly, is a Napanee man and has been in Kingston for the past two years. He was first employed by the Kingston corporation in the light and power department. His wife, who is in the city, was at his side soon after the accident, and his parents arrived from Napanee Thursday night. Those who saw the accident were horrified." Deceased was married and besides his wife, leaves a mother and father and

BY CHARLES GARVICE

Author of "The Verdict of the Heart," "A Heritage of Hate," "Nell of Shorne Mills," "Paid For," "A Modern Juliet," Etc.

What had happened to him? A moment or two ago, before he had entered the room, he had been master of himself, sole possessor of his soul. And now, his dark eyes sought the lovely face, and all the world seemed to stand still, as if it were gazing with him and listening with him to the exquisite voice, so low and sweet, so full of music, so sad, and yet with a subtle suggestion of tenderness and passion.

He threw his head up as if he were trying to throw off the impression, the spell, under which he had fallen as suddenly, as helplessly as if he had been mesmerized.

"We've just come from the Court."

Vane was saying in cool, conventional tones. "Mr. Shore and I have been playing Bachelor Hall there."

She turned her eyes to Julian and smiled, and he felt a thrill, the thrill of a sudden passion which sways a man as a reed is swayed by the wind, the passion against whose tyranny the strongest man is as weak as the veriest babe. Unconsciously he moistened his lips with his tongue for the power of speech seemed to have deserted him.

"My first visit," he said, scarcely knowing what he said.

"Yes?"

That was all, just the one word; but in Julian Shore's ears it was like a note of heavenly music.

CHAPTER XIV.

Nina had, at last, found her good Samaritan.

"To think of your finding the way to the very street, and me just driving up at the very moment!" Polly exclaimed the next morning with infinite satisfaction. "That's what they call the long arm of coincidence, isn't it? Anyhow, whatever it was, I'm jolly glad. You look better after your night's rest, dear, and as beautiful as ever. What luck for me that I haven't gone to the Provinces! Mr. Harcourt's taken a London theatre. The Momus, you know, and 'My Lady's Pride' is going strong. Now, do try to eat some breakfast, there's a dear, good girl! And don't sigh so! You're safe and with a friend—if you don't mind having me for one."

Nina tried to express her gratitude, but Polly waved it aside with the hand in which she held her needle; she was hard at work trimming a hat.

"Don't you talk like that, Miss Wood; and you wouldn't if you knew how proud I was to have you here. Why, too, didn't you see that I'd taken a fancy to you on board the ship? I've thought of you ever so many times since, and wondered what had become of you and whether we should ever meet again. Bother this feather; it won't go right! And now you're actually sitting there—and going to sit there, leastways in the mirror. 'I wouldn't be seen dead in a ditch with it!'

"Let me look at it. Give it to me. May I try?" said Nina.

Polly tossed it to her, and leaning back in her chair, watched her as she twisted the feather this way and that and arranged and rearranged the ribbon. At last Nina held it out deprecatingly, and Polly tried it on.

"Oh, you dear!" she exclaimed, joyfully. "That's splendid! It isn't quite like the one in the shop, but it's twenty times more pretty and stylish. I've never had such a hat; it's a duck and a darling! And how quickly you did it! Why, I've been hours and hours fumbling at it!"

"I'm glad you like it," said Nina. "I used to trim my own hats and make my own dresses—"

"And no wonder, if they were as good as this!" said Polly. "Why"—she stopped suddenly and pursed her lips—"I'm going to rehearsal in that hat, and if I don't knock the rest of the girls with it, well—I'm afraid I must go now, dear. You won't feel lonely while I'm away? And you won't fret? Promise!"

"I sha'n't feel so lonely if you will leave me something to do," said Nina. "Isn't there another hat, for instance, or a blouse or a dress that wants mending?"

Polly dragged a blouse from a box under the bed and slipped it on.

"That was made for me, if you please!" she cried with infinite scorn. "Observe the fit! You can't tell the back from the front, can you? And I paid twenty-two-and-six for it; I did, indeed!"

"It wants taking in here," said Nina.

"It wants burning!" retorted Polly, indignantly. "You don't mean to say you can alter it?"

"I can try. Let me, while you are away, Polly."

She set to work at it immediately. Polly had gone, and in her pleasure and satisfaction in doing even a little for the girl who had not only befriended her but bestowed her affection upon her, she found some relief of mind and spirit. She tried to think only of the present and her terribly vague future, but every now and then, in the quietude of the room, the picture of the past rose before her, and one man's figure stood out prominently in it.

Polly was away about three hours, and when she returned she carried a hat-box in her hand. Her face was flushed, her eyes were sparkling.

"Not done the blouse, really?" she cried.

"Oh, yes, some time ago. Slip off your jacket and let me try it on. Is that better? Oh, I hope so!"

"It fits like a miracle!" said Polly, solemnly. "I tell you what it is, Decima, you are a born genius! And look here! What do you think I've got here?"

She whipped out a hat and some er should ever meet again. Bother this feather; it won't go right! And now you're actually sitting there—and going to sit there, leastways stop here with me for a long time—for always, if you like. But, lor' bless me, I know that's nonsense. You'll be off to your friends directly and forget all about Polly Bainford—no, I don't mean that! You're not the sort to forget."

"No, I shall not forget you and your great kindness, Polly," said Nina. "Won't you call me Decima, please?"

Polly jumped up to the infinite peril of the hat, and kissed her.

"Of course I will! I've been dying to do so, but I thought you wouldn't like it. You see you're a swell, a lady, and I'm only a poor girl."

Nina sighed woefully.

"You cannot be so poor as I, or so friendless," she said. "I haven't a penny in the world, or a friend—"

Polly jumped up again, and taking an old tobacco jar from the mantelshelf emptied its contents on the table.

"You've half of that, anyhow," she said, emphatically, "and you've got one friend, at any rate. There, don't cry"—for Nina's eyes had filled with tears. "There's nothing to cry about in being poor. If I haven't been quite without a penny, I've been pretty near it. Something always turns up just when things are at their worst. There's a kind of luck, chance, in it. It's always just when you think you're going under that a friendly wave carries you on shore. I'm your friendly wave."

"Yes, indeed!" said Nina. "But, Polly, dear, I could not be a burden to you. I cannot stay and be a drag on you. I must find some work—" she sighed bitterly. "How easy it is to say that, but how difficult it is to find the work!"

She gave Polly an account of her experiences with the agents, and Polly snorted wrathfully.

"I should like to punch that young bouncer's head!" she said. "The colossal impudence he must have had! To think that you'd be seen out with him! But there are plenty of things you can do. Let me see. You wouldn't for instance, like the profession, I suppose?"

"What is the profession?" asked Nina, eagerly.

"Why, the theatrical—mine—ours!" replied Polly with surprise. "Don't you know that it's the only profession worth speaking about?"

Nina shook her head and smiled.

"I'm afraid I've no talent for the stage," she said. "And—and I don't think I should like it."

"Really?" said Polly with a surprise that was flattering to the dramatic profession. "That's a pity, for you're cut out for it. Such a face and figure! Oh, you may smile; but in my opinion you're one of the prettiest girls I've met; and Mr. Harcourt would agree with me if he saw you. Well, of all the stupid hats! And yet I thought I'd got the one I saw in the window quite fixed in my mind. I went in and bought the materials; you see you get the hat so much cheaper if you trim it yourself. But I suppose I've forgotten just how the trimming went."

She put the hat on her head, and, surveying herself in the glass, uttered an exclamation of impatient disgust and made a grimace at herself

Decima, you are a born genius! And look here! What do you think I've got here?"

She whipped out a hat and some materials.

"See that! I told you I should knock 'em! Why, the girls were like a flock of bees round me the moment I stepped on the stage. Oh, what a pretty hat, Polly! Where did you get it?" and that sort of thing. They were positively green with envy. Then I worked the idea that struck me just before I went out, and I told 'em I'd get as pretty a one for 'em for twelve-and-six. They wouldn't believe at first; but Jessie Green said she'd trust me and fished out the money there and then. I told 'em my terms were cash, you know. So I bought the things as I came home—the same shop; it's a cheap but stylish one—and here you are. Hat and materials cost eight-and-nine; profit, three-and-three. But perhaps you don't think it's enough—" doubtfully.

Nina actually laughed up at her.

"Give it to me!" she said. "Why, it will take no time. And how pretty it is! Oh, I do hope I shall trim it to please her!"

Polly snorted. "Trust you for that! Jessie's bound to like it; and see here, Decima, if she does, the other girls will want to have their hats trimmed, for she's one of the best-dressed of our lot. I told her I'd got a swell milliner who'd do the things for us on the cheap."

"What a clever girl you are—notwithstanding the fib," said Nina, laughing again. "I think this ribbon ought to go like this."

"It won't go any way, until you've had some lunch," said Polly, taking the hat from her. "Oh, I know your sort at sight; you're one of those girls who'd work themselves to death if they weren't stopped at it. You've done a hat and a blouse to-day, and that's—oh, don't color up and look at me like that; I'm not going to offer to pay you for them!"

"I should think not!" said Nina, indignantly.

Polly allowed her to go to work soon after lunch, but, though the hat was finished, Polly refused to take it with her to the theatre that evening.

"Not much!" she said, knowingly. "What! Give the show away! No, no! Friend so full up with work that she couldn't think of even looking at the hat to-day. Oh, no. If you want to get on in any business, you mustn't make yourself too cheap; you must give yourself airs and put on frills. Why, don't you know that real swells, ladies and duchesses, have gone into the millinery business? Some of 'em run afternoon tea shops. Last would suit me better; more change and society, don't you know. But perhaps you wouldn't like that so well?"

"No, I think not," assented Nina.

"So I thought. I know your sort. You're the 'humble violet shrinking in the shade.' There ain't many of 'em about nowadays," added the shrewd Polly, "more's the pity!"

She brought home another order—a toque this time—and Nina worked at it—for some reason, inexplicable to the male mind, a toque is a more elaborate performance than a hat—all the next day. Polly approved of it, but looked at Decima with stern scrutiny.

"You're working yourself to death, and you're thinking all the time," Nina colored quickly. "Look here, you want a change. Come to the theatre to-night. I'll pass you in."

Nina shrank from the offer for awhile, but finally gave in. Polly got her a seat in the upper circle—a back seat with a pillar to dodge—

a part to suit her."

The toque was as great a as the preceding "confectioner" had turned out, and near day Polly brought home a finer. She put the price up, and the joint earnings of girls enabled them not only better, but to go for little in the day time; so that Nina began to lose its sharp something of the old light creep back to her eyes. Polly her promise not to work at livery at night, and Nina part time while Polly was at the reading—and dreaming past. an actress, and Polly, after she had put the shawl round Nina, went back to the sitting-room they now shared and read "Betrothed" without a scruple.

When she had finished it she jumped up, slipped on her hat and jacket and stole stealthily down stairs to the girl typewriter who lodged on the first floor back.

"How soon can you copy that?" she asked.

"This day week," said the girl, wearily.

Polly laughed. "Get it done in three hours—oh, I know how long it will take; lodged with a typewriter once—and I'll give you an extra two shillings."

"Make it half-a-crown," said the girl, wistfully; and Polly made it half-a-crown.

Nina got up in the evening—she felt strangely exhausted all day—and going to the drawer took out the MSS. and burnt it carefully and slowly sheet by sheet. Then she sighed heavily, and shaking herself, as one shakes off an illusion and a weakness, got a book and read; but every now and then she looked at the fire which had consumed her "Betrothed," and checked a sigh larger even than the first.

Polly carried the typewritten copy to the theatre. But she did not fly to the manager and exclaim that she had a masterpiece in her possession; she was too clever for such folly. She knew too well that Mr. Harcourt would recoil as if the word "play" were synonymous with "snake."

It is true that managers live by plays, but—ah, well, it is easier for a millionaire to dispose of his millions than for a new author to persuade a manager to look at the first effort.

She went to Miss Tracey—to talk about the hat—and dropped the play just by the door, where Miss Tracey found it, glanced at it with surprise, pitched it behind the looking-glass, and promptly forgot it. Her maid, hunting for some grease paint, found it and laid it on the top of the pin-cushion. Miss Tracey picked it up resentfully and attacked the manager with it when he came into the room a little later.

"I wish you wouldn't leave your silly plays about, Mr. Harcourt," showed me that little play. It's not good, of course, but we might knock it into shape. Miss Tracey says the principal part will suit her. I'm inclined to try it. Of course, your friend, Mr.—Mr.—"

"Wood," suggested Polly. "Ah, yes, Wood, wouldn't expect anything for it?"

"Oh, but he would!" said Polly. "He's not poor—not what you'd call poor. His father left him an independent income—"

Mr. Harcourt took up a bundle of letters and kept his eye on them in an absorption so long and profound that any one less sophisticated than Polly would have been convinced that he had forgotten the play and her. But Polly waited in bland security. She knew she had her fish on the hook; the thing was to land him.

"Eh?" he said, looking up at last and pretending to be aware of her presence. "Oh, ah, yes; the play. Oh, well, usual terms. He'd better come and see me."

"He can't, poor fellow; he's a cripple. But I'll tell him what you say and get him to sign the agreement."

Mr. Harcourt looked at her sharply.

"You weren't born yesterday?" he said with a smile.

"No, the day before, sir," said Polly, demurely.

"I should have said last week, now," he retorted. "Here, Mr. Thompson, fill in an agreement for this thing, will you?"

Polly took a cab home, held her hand to still the beating of her good little heart, and entered the room with a yawn which stretched her expressive mouth to cavernous proportions.

"Been reading all the time, dear?" Nina put down her book.

"No. I've got the supper. Is there any news?" For, actress as she was, Polly could not quite conceal her excitement.

"N—o, nothing. Oh, yes! They're going to put on a new curtain raiser."

Nina bent over the saucepan she had taken off the fire.

"It was time," she said, quietly. "What's the title of it? Who is it by?"

"The title is"—Polly got close to her, took the saucepan from her and

"I wish you wouldn't leave your silly plays about, Mr. Harcourt," she said, pettishly.

"No play of mine," he said with listless indignation.

"Then where did it come from?"

"Don't know, don't want to know. Want to speak to you about this first thing. Have to come off. People won't stand it."

"I'm not surprised. It's worse than bad. What will you put in its place?"

Mr. Harcourt mentioned an "old favorite."

Miss Tracey shrieked "Not for me, thanks!"

"Pon my soul, there's no pleasing you!" he grumbled as he left the room.

Miss Tracey threw the play aside, then picked it up, saw that it was typewritten and began to read it. In less than five minutes her attitude changed from peevish disquietude to one of absorbed attention, and presently she sprang to her feet and called impatiently to her maid.

"Jenny, this play—who brought it here—who's been in my room? Yesterday it was. Now, keep your eyes in your head, though so far as their usefulness goes you might drop them. Quick!"

Jenny assured her that no one had been in the room—excepting Miss Bainford.

"Then fetch Miss Bainford." Jenny had not far to go; Polly was hovering in the corridor.

"Oh, Miss Tracey, I left it here then!" she exclaimed. "I'm so glad I found it! I thought I must have dropped it in the street. Oh, thank you!" She held out her hand, with an innocent expression.

Miss Tracey whipped hers behind her back.

"Who wrote it? It's—its' not bad," she said. No actor will admit that a play is good unless he has the leading part actually in his possession. No manager will admit, under any circumstances, that a play is good. It would hurt him too much.

The belief that no woman can write a successful play still exists, notwithstanding some notable instances to the contrary; and Polly, who was quite aware of the prejudice, which is as hard to kill as an annuitant, said, with the same innocent expression:

"Oh, it's my friend Miss Wood's brother. He's an invalid—a cripple. His name's Herbert. He lent it me to read, but I haven't had time. Oh, Polly, Polly! He'd be mad if I hadn't found it!"

Miss Tracey still held on to the play.

"It's not at all bad," she said, guardedly, "and there's a part in it that I rather fancy. I'll speak to Mr. Harcourt about it, if you like."

Polly went home in a state of suppressed excitement, which she concealed beneath a show of extreme weariness.

"Don't you ever have anything to do with the theatre, Decima," she adjured. "It's a poor game at the best, and at the worst—" She shrugged her shoulders.

"I'm not at all likely to," said Nina with a smile and a sigh, which, quiet as it was, Polly heard.

Mr. Harcourt sent for her two days afterward. Oh, the suspense of those two days! If the "Betrothed" had been Polly's own betrothed she could not have suffered more keenly.

"Oh, Miss Bainford," he said with touching listlessness, "Miss Tracey had taken on the me. "It was time," she said, quietly. "What's the title of it? Who is it by?"

"The title is"—Polly got close to her, took the saucepan from her and set it on the table, regardless of the cloth—"the title is 'The Betrothed,' and it's by a new man named—Herbert Wood!" she said as she flung her arms around Nina's neck and hugged and swayed her.

CHAPTER XV.

It was a fluke, of course, aided by Polly's sharpness; and it is to be hoped that it will not inspire the sagacious reader to sit down and write a play, either in one or three acts.

It was put in rehearsal at once, and, of course, the troubles which always beset a play, from its birth to its production, and not seldom afterwards, at once set in. There was a part in it for which Mr. Harcourt cast the low comedy lady—she used to be called a soubrette—but the lady didn't like it—said it wasn't "strong" enough.

"Not strong enough, if you please!" exclaimed Polly to Nina with a snort. "Why, it's as strong as Sandow, only it's in a new and quiet way. She likes a part that let's her tear about the stage and knock the men's hats off; and, of course, this doesn't suit her. Not strong! Why, listen to this!"

She did a bit of the part, and Nina's eyes sparkled. But she said nothing; she could be as secretive as Polly—it is a gift which most women possess—but the next evening she gave Polly a letter for Mr. Harcourt.

He read it, stared fixedly at Polly, frowned doubtfully, then said with acute misery in his voice and countenance:

"Well, you can try it—only try it, mind! We'll see how you get on at the next rehearsal. Now, what are you staring at?"

"I don't know what you mean," said Polly.

"Oh, don't you? Well, your friend, Mr. Wood, wants you to have the part of Sally Brown."

Polly uttered a cry and the tears sprang into her eyes.

Are You Blue and Worried?

Nervous? Some of the time really ill? Catch cold easily and frequently suffer from biliousness or headache? The reason is that your system does not rid itself of the poisons in the blood; just as impossible as it is for the grate of a stove to rid itself of clinkers. The waste does to us exactly what the clinkers do to the stove; make the fires burn low until enough clinkers have accumulated and then prevent its burning at all. Your liver is sluggish—you are dull and heavy—sleep does not rest, nor is food appetizing. In this condition illness develops. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery eradicates the poisons from the body—a glyceric alternative extract made from bloodroot, golden seal and mandrake root, stone and quercu's root, without the use of alcohol. No matter how strong the constitution the stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" at times; in consequence the blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood.

MRS. BLAKE.

Mrs. BENJ. BLAKE, of Port Dover, Ont., Box 35, writes: "I have been a great sufferer for years from throat trouble, catarrh, indigestion, female troubles, bloating, constipation and nervousness—at times I would be in bed, then able to be up again. Was under many different doctors' care, and would get better for a little while, then I would go down with chronic inflammation all through me. For nineteen years I had this poison in my blood. After trying nearly everything I got worse. I read in The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. I have taken the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' and have used five bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. I am now able to do my work and walk with pleasure. I feel like a new woman. I enjoy everything around me and thank God for letting me live long enough to find something that made me well again."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate liver and bowels.

Our Postage Stamps.

A statistician has figured out that if all the stamps issued by the government during the past fiscal year were collected and laid end to end they would form a chain 18,000 miles long, about equal to the distance from New York to the Philippines. The number was 10,061,439,768, representing a face value of $180,957,385. Of the whole number 5,130,249,018 were two cent stamps and 3,798,961,039 were one cent stamps. But one thirty cent stamp was issued.

Alfonso as an English Lord.

Every one is aware that there are many ties of blood connecting the court of Spain with that of England, but it is not generally known that if, like his neighbor in Portugal, King Alfonso ever finds it necessary to take up his abode in England he will be able to sit in the house of lords. There is an old barony of Lancaster derelict for at least 500 years to which King Alfonso is the direct heir or else a co-heir, probably the former.

PRESS COMMENTS.

Guelph Mercury—If there's anything you don't want repeated, or that you don't want to face afterwards, either in love or politics—why, don't put it on paper.

Lethbridge Herald—When the Duke of Connaught breathes South Alberta air for a couple of days he will demand that the Vice-Regal residence be established at Lethbridge.

Montreal Star—Just as surely as we rejected reciprocity last year we must support an adequate contribution to the Imperial navy this year—and for precisely the same reason.

Galt Reformer—If it is a criminal offence to sell impure or diluted milk, it should not be less an offence to deny the children of the poor this valuable food by asking for it a price which is prohibitive.

Sydney Post—If the men could only become inoculated with the spirit of cleanliness possessed by women the town would be healthier, more attractive to visitors, and more desirable for residence. Wake up, men, and do your fair share of the spring housecleaning.

Winnipeg Tribune—The inhabitants of the tight little island have long since abolished all taxes upon their mental food. The acquisition of knowledge is not hindered by iniquitous taxes there. When shall we follow their good example in this matter? Ask the manufacturers of paper, type and printing presses.

Montreal Witness—No one seems to have considered it necessary to get the evidence of a third-class passenger placed before the investigating committee. Yet there is little doubt that such a story and such evidence would have been both interesting and important. One or two stories which have been told by third-class survivors do not seem to be reassuring.

Vancouver Sun—At the present time the energies of the Church are to some extent dissipated by rivalry, generous and commendable rivalry, it is true. But if all the devoted labor which is now performed under division were applied under union,

POOR, BUT ORIGINAL.

Points For Girls Whose Social Obligations Weigh Heavily.

A charming hostess gives the secret of her unusual entertaining: "I am too poor not to be original. I cannot attempt to compete with my wealthy friends, so I must make up in ideas what I lack in money."

She does it! One is sure at her home of being entertained, not elaborately, but so delightfully that an invitation is coveted by those who can afford to spend five times as much on their pleasure giving.

Here is a point for the girl who feels her social obligations weigh heavily. It is natural—or should be—to dislike receiving constant hospitality for which no return is made, yet that is what the girl of small means must face.

One such girl refused four invitations to parties she was anxious to attend. When questioned by a friend she replied, "I can't go out, for I can't afford to entertain, and I'm not going to be a sponge."

That is a most foolish attitude. Society is not a charitable institution. There is no law compelling a hostess to dispense her favors, so the girl who receives an invitation from one to whom she is not indebted may be sure she is wanted.

There is another alternative than cutting society, which is to have the courage to entertain simply. It does take courage in this day of elaboration and expense, but the girl who makes the attempt will find her efforts appreciated by those who can afford the most ultra entertaining.

It does not cost much to have a dozen or more friends in for a cup of tea. Any woman can manage this. A well appointed tea table with one girl to pour while the hostess makes herself agreeable to her guests, can be made very pleasant.

Be sure the tea is good, the sandwiches novel and delicious and the cake homemade. That is all that need be served, though extra touches, like homemade candy of unusual kind, crisp buttered toast or salted peanuts, are inexpensive additions.

BIRTHDAY GIFTS.

Book Covers Made by Donor of Present.

The value of a book chosen for its useful or practical contents may be much enhanced by means of a pretty cover, made by the giver.

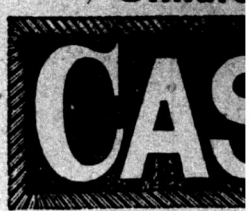

Beautiful as well as hard wearing covers are made from Holland or linen closely embroidered in dark, heavy silks in an appropriate conventional pattern, while for volumes of poems or romance the cover can be of handsome brocade enriched with gold thread.

Useful covers for everyday books are made more plainly from colored art canvas, with the title worked or painted across the front.

Imitation leather is another practical material for the purpose, especially where paper covered books are concerned. It can be obtained from any stationer or bookbinder.

If you intend to make a rather costly attachable book cover as a birthday or wedding gift your best course is to measure exactly the outer sides of the book so as to buy only the exact

time the energies of the Church are to some extent dissipated by rivalry, generous and commendable rivalry, it is true. But if all the devoted labor which is now performed under division were applied under union, well directed, how much more hopeful would be the outlook for the evangelization of heathendom.

Toronto News—The idea of politicians and members of parliament messing about with the civil service is objectionable, and grows more so every day. The country is sick of office peddling and one-horse espionage, of patronage committees and members' recommendations. In the past everything about a civil servant has been considered but merit. It is time to make merit the sole desideratum.

Manitoba Free Press—Ontario, as population now stands, has the power, and exercised it last September, of defeating the policy which a majority of the people in the west believe would be in the best interest of the national progress and welfare. The west must needs submit to the rule of the majority, but the time will come when the majority will be on this side of the great lakes.

St. Thomas Journal—The people will not permit absolute power in finance to be wielded by half a dozen large corporations. They will demand regulation far beyond any inspection that is now proposed. It is possible also that the argument will be used, as it is used in the case of railways, that any business that is in its nature a monopoly should be a Government monopoly, and not a private one.

Syracuse Post-Standard—The United States is not going to annex Canada, for two reasons: We don't want it and Canada doesn't want it. As to commercial relations, we shall make them just as close and intimate and profitable as we are able, for the selfish and sordid reason that there is money in Canadian trade. Whether Canada wants close trade relations made closer is for Canada to say. If British statesmen and newspapers receive the press stuff of the Canadian railways they will note that than a million Americans have emigrated to the Canadian North-West in the last decade. They are not so much concerned about getting a market for their goods, and they would as soon be adjunct to Chicago as Montreal. Better look out lest Americans in Canada show a treasurable preference for the nearer market.

any stationer or bookbinder.

If you intend to make a rather costly attachable book cover as a birthday or wedding gift your best course is to measure exactly the outer sides of the book so as to buy only the exact quantity of material needed.

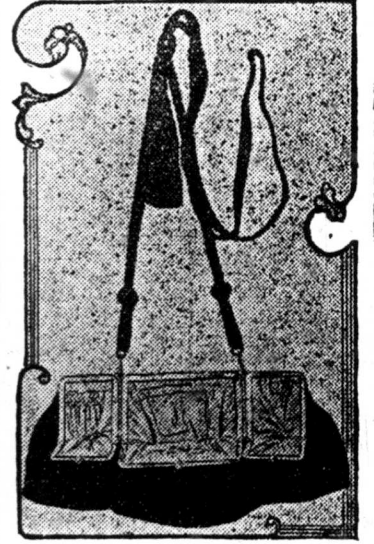

The back should be formed from a strip of some soft leather, such as French kid or morocco, which, although substantial, may be sewed to the side covers. These are fitted over the book by means of two inch deep flaps of kid or strong ribbon.

It is also a good plan to attach ribbon ties and a dainty embroidered bookmark to match. The cover, as an additional finish, might be bordered all round with a half inch wide silk fringe. This proves very effective.

Plain covers made from fragments of chine ribbon, brocade or tapestry are easily and quickly contrived by clever fingers and sell well at fairs.

How to Get a Change.

When it is impossible to move a convalescent into different surroundings for the sake of a change move the furniture and pictures of the room into different places. Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

TIME waits for no man, although it has been known to loaf around a year or two for a woman.

The people who frequently have to resort to expedients are those who can't afford to, but do.

As a rule a lie costs all you get out of it.

Marriage brings out all there is in a man, including the loose change in his pocket.

An optimist is a person who believes in himself when nobody is looking.

Always believe in your friends. It will help them to help themselves to your possessions more easily.

All a woman asks is to be allowed to go her own way and take her husband with her.

Remember that, though each is the architect of his own life, yet he has not the ordering of the material.

The person who bears burdens cheerfully may be stupid, but he is a social treasure.

Effect of the Season.

Do not blame the humble poet
If he must explode or sing,
Though in measure lame and halting,
At the coming of the spring.
Though he may not burst a hamstring
In a grand poetic swell,
He at least can trip a ditty
To the lily in the dell.

Who would not when spring is coming
Pegasus serenely climb
And express his pent emotions
In a bit of vagrant rhyme,
Or, if he is not a rider
Or for cowboy methods keen,
In his dingy, smoke stained office
Peck it out on his machine?

So uplifting is the coming
Of the season young and strong
That the dullest feels the throbbing
Of his pulses to a song,
And he grabs up all the language
That he learned in days gone by
And proceeds to take a flier
Though his meter may be shy.

Buds and blossoms, little birdies
And the balmy, friendly breeze
Group themselves upon the pages
And are very much at ease.
So the man becomes a poet,
Singing, light of heart and gay.
But he very soon recovers
When the blizzard comes next day.

TRUTHFUL ADVERTISING THE BASIS OF SUCCESS.

Understood.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—The ac-

popular household remedy in the world have been made known to the public. This means a new era in the advertising of popular family medicines—Peruna leads.

Peruna contains among other things, golden seal, powerful in its effect upon the mucous membranes. Cedron seed, a rare medicine and unsurpassed tonic.
Cubebs, valuable in nasal catarrh and affections of the kidneys and bladder. Stone root, valuable for the nerves, mucous membranes
as well as in dropsy and indigestion.

The Coming Fashion.

A TACTFUL VOTER.

How He Decided Upon His Ballot In an Alsatian Election.

The simple people of Alsace, who retain in their hearts a strong love for France at the same time that they are desirous not to offend their German rulers too much, frequently have a hard time of it when they go to the ballot to vote for representatives in the German parliament.

In one election in a certain Alsatian district the two candidates were Kable, an Alsatian of French sympathies, who had protested against the annexation after the war of 1870, and a German. On election day a peasant went to the polling place, which was presided over by a German official. The peasant had in one hand a ticket on which was printed the name of Kable and in the other a ticket bearing the name of the German candidate.

“Mein herr,” he said to the German election official, “will you tell me which of these tickets is the better one?”

The officer looked at him. “Why, this is much preferable,” said he, indicating the German’s ticket.

“Ah, I thank you,” answered the peasant. “I will keep it next my heart.” He folded it carefully and put it inside his coat. “As for this other, then,” said he, with an air of putting it away from him as an unworthy thing, “I will leave it here.” And he put the Kable ticket in the ballot box.—New York Press.

ASTONISH THE SHARKS.

Aitutaki Islanders Pull Them Up by the Tail With Ropes.

The island of Aitutaki, one of the Hervey group, in the Pacific, is surrounded by islets underneath which are submarine caverns, the homes of sharks. These sharks, which are about six feet long, are esteemed a delicacy, and the natives catch them with nooses.

Arrived over the entrance to the shark cave, the fisherman leaves his canoe to the care of his companions and dives to the bottom, carrying with him a strong cord tied into a slip knot. He expects to find two or three sharks at home well satisfied and drowsy after feeding in the lagoon, with their tails toward the entrance. Selecting the largest, the diver adroitly adjusts a noose over the tail, taking care that it hangs loosely. If he has another noose he secures a second shark.

The shark catcher now, with one bound on the white, sandy bottom, rises to the surface in order to assist his friends in hauling up the fish. The astonished shark suddenly finds itself ascending tail first to the surface, when a smart blow from an ax between the eyes or on the tail ends its career.—Exchange.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
May 6th, 1912.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor W. T. Waller in the chair.

Present—Reeve Alexander and Councillors Madill, Osborne, Dickinson and Denison.

The minutes of the last regular and special session were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from C. M. Warner, president of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society, stating that he had taken the liberty of advertising meetings of the Ontario Historical Society to be held in the town hall on the afternoon of June 5th, also on the afternoon and evening of June 6th, and requested that the council sanction the use of the hall on those dates without any cost to the Society.

The request of Mr. Warner was granted.

Another communication was read from Mr. Warner asking the town to co-operate with the Historical Society in having the town fittingly decorated during the visit of the members of the Ontario Historical Society and the holding of their annual meeting in our midst. The writer suggested that an arch be built on Dundas street extending from the Merchants Bank corner across to M. S. Madole's corner, and that a banner bearing the words "Welcome, O. H. S.," be placed thereon.

Mayor Waller, Reeve Alexander and Councillors Madill and Denison were appointed a committee to confer with Mr. Warner in the matter as indicated by the communication, and report to the council at its next meeting.

Coun. Simpson entered.

A communication was read from the W. C. T. U., stating that at a meeting of that society a resolution was passed that the council be petitioned to enforce the Ontario statutes in reference to curfew bell, which regulates the time when children of a certain age must retire to their homes at night.

Ordered laid on the table until next meeting of council.

Coun. Carson entered.

A communication was read from Wm. H. Wardwell, Mechanical Engineer, Montreal, stating that he was seeking a site for an industrial plant to employ in the neighborhood of 600 hands regularly throughout the year. He stated they would require between five and ten acres of land, with, of course, good shipping facilities. He also stated that he would be pleased to learn what inducements the town would give.

On motion of Councillors Madill and Denison the clerk was instructed to write the gentleman giving the information asked for, and inviting him to visit Napanee and look the situation over.

A communication was read from W. G. Wilson, county clerk, stating that the county council at its March session equalized the assessment of this municipality at $800,000, and the levy for the town would be $4000.

Ordered filed.

A communication was read from the Local Board of Health which was as follows: That the Local Board of Health has passed a resolution recommending that the following sewers be constructed on sanitary grounds, namely: 1—On Bridge street, from Richard street, easterly to East street; 2—On the Newburgh Road, from or near the East Ward School, south westerly and connecting with the in-

IS THIS THE METALLIC MISSING LINK?

John Cogswell in MAY CANADA
MONTHLY.

Recently Andrew Gordon French, conducting operations near Nelson, British Columbia, brought to the attention of the scientific world a new metal, Canadium.

"Its physical and chemical properties are interesting," says a chemist who has investigated the new metal. "It has a brilliant white lustre, does not oxidize in the oxidizing flames of the blow-pipe, melts at a little lower temperature than silver and gold and is somewhat softer than platinum. From a chemical standpoint it is electro-negative to silver, is precipitated from its solution by zinc and may be separated from lead by cupellation. It is easily soluble in hydrochloric and nitric acids and is not precipitated by chlorides or iodides. It does not tarnish in damp air, sulphurated hydrogen or alkaline sulphides.

"This somewhat extraordinary combination of properties is one that leaves little doubt as to the genuineness of the find and raises questions of very great interest as to the character and position of the new metal. Its easy solubility separates it from the known metals which generally accompany platinum, and its melting point is at least 500 degrees C, below that of any of the platinum group. Sufficient data are not at hand to locate it definitely among the metals, but the possibilities are somewhat sensational.

constructed on sanitary grounds, namely: 1—On Bridge street, from Richard street, easterly to East street; 2—On the Newburgh Road, from or near the East Ward School, south westerly and connecting with the intersecting sewer on Dundas street; 3—On East street, from Thomas street to Dundas street; 4—On Centre street, from a point at or near the southern boundary of the G. T. R., southerly to and connecting with the intersecting sewer on Dundas street; 5—On Robert street, from Ann street, southerly to and connecting with the intersecting sewer on Dundas street.

The Board of Health further recommends that a by-law be passed by the council requiring that wherever there are flushed closets in buildings, or that may hereafter be put in any building along the line of streets upon which are constructed permanent sewers that said closets be properly connected with the said permanent sewers.

On motion of Reeve Alexander and Coun. Denison the recommendation of the Board of Health was adopted, and the Streets Committee were instructed to co-operate with the town clerk in having a by-law prepared and presented to the council in accordance with the last clause of the Board of Health recommendation.

Mayor Waller called to the attention of the council the fact that Hon. S. Hughes, Minister of Militia, was favorably inclined to the establishing in towns and cities of drill halls, and felt satisfied that with a little effort Napanee could get the government to establish one here. He suggested that Hon. S. Hughes be invited to visit Napanee.

On motion Councillors Osborne, Dickinson, Simpson and Mayor Waller were appointed a committee to deal with the question and endeavor to make arrangements to have Hon. S. Hughes pay Napanee a visit and look over the town and inspect some favorable sites.

Mr. C. A. Walters, local manager of the Seymour Power and Electric Co., in a communication of Coun. R. J. Dickinson, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, intimated that the Seymour Co., intended making some changes in their light distributing lines which would affect the manner of lighting the eastern outlying section of the town. If the council were desirous of making any changes in the manner of lighting this portion of the town now was the time to have it done. There would be no cost to the town in having any suggested change made at this time.

Referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee to investigate and report.

The Town Property Committee were instructed to furnish the council with an estimate of the cost of painting the band stand in the Harvey Warner park. Also the cost of repairing and painting the seats belonging to the park.

Moved by Coun. Osborne, seconded by Coun. Dickinson, that the town clerk be instructed to write Mr. Biggar, of the legal department of the Grand Trunk Railway, calling attention to the fact that the station at Napanee is a source of danger to the travelling public at night owing to insufficient lighting, and ask that this matter be given immediate consideration. Carried.

Moved by Coun. Carson, seconded by Coun. Simpson, that the Fire, Water and Light Committee notify the Water Works Co., that it is considered necessary that they proceed at once with the extension of their water mains on Centre street which leads to the site of the Napanee Iron Works, Limited. Carried.

CHICAGO, May 6.—An upheaval in wheat prices to-day resulted from the bullish showing in Ohio and Missouri state crop reports and from equally alarming figures collected by the grain dealers of Illinois. The market touched new high levels for the season, $1.18 and $1.15 respectively for May and July, and closed with a gain of 1c to 1 3-4c net. Corn finished 1-8c to 5-8c down, oats varying from 3-4c off to 1-8c advance and provisions strung out 7 1-2c each way from the prices current 48 hours ago.

wheat 3/4d to 3/8d higher than yesterday,
and on corn 3/4d higher. Berlin wheat closed 3/4c higher, Budapest 1 1/2c higher, dirt and you check the fly. Exposed manure piles and garbage heaps are

 flies and less danger from the diseases
 for which the flies are responsible."

Stockers and Feeders

Mr. C. Zeagman & Sons will have 100
 stockers and light feeders on sale at the City Market on Tuesday, amongst which is one load of good yearlings, 450 to 500
 lbs. each, also another good load of one to two-year-old heifers and steers, 550 to 800 lbs. each; also another load of one and two-year-old steers, 500 to 650 lbs.
 each.

Milkers and Springers

The market for milkers and springers
 was as strong as at any time last week.
 Prices ranged from $8 to $10, with one choice at $11, and another extra choice at $10. McDonald & Halligan topped the market for milkers, as well as exporters.
 They sold seven milkers and springers at $8 to $10 each.

Veal Calves.

Not many on sale; prices firm, at $4 to $7.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, were sold at $6 to $7.25;
 yearlings, from $3 to $4.75 per cwt., and spring lambs at $4 to $7 each.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $7.75,
 and $7.40 was the price reported for f.o.b.
 cars, but we know of $7.40 being paid to farmers.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 6.—At the Montreal
 Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending May 4
 were 1175 cattle, 20 sheep and lambs, 3175
 hogs and 2000 calves. The offerings for sale on the market this morning amounted to 800 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 1780
 hogs and 375 calves.

The market for cattle was without any special feature to-day, prices for all grades being firmly maintained. The supply was not as large as a week ago, but a fairly active trade was done and a good clearance was made. The quality condition will be only fair, and that present prices will likely be sustained for the balance of this month. The offering of really choice steers was rather limited,

 and sales of full loads were made at $7.50,
 while good stock changed hands at $7,
 and steers weighing from 1000 to 1050 lbs.
 each brought $6.75 per 100 lbs.

The milch cow trade has improved considerably of late, and, as supplies have been none too large to fill the requirements, a stronger feeling has prevailed
 in the market, and prices have advanced $5 to $10 per head.

Prices for hogs declined 10c to 20c per 100 lbs., which was due principally to the increased supplies offered. At this reduction there was an active demand from packers, as they were mostly all short of stock, consequently a brisk trade was done, and sales of selected lots were made freely at $9.40 to $9.65 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

The trade in small meats was quiet, on account of the limited supplies offered,
 which is usually the case in the beginning of the week, and in consequence the tone of the market was steady, with no change in prices to note. Spring lambs are selling all the way from $4 to $10
 each, as to size and quality.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.50 to $7.75;
 do., medium, $6.25 to $6.75; do., common,
 $4.50 to $5; do., choice cows, $6.25 to $6.50;
 do., medium, $5.75 to $6; do., bulls, $5.35 to $6.75; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $90;
 do., common and medium, each, $65 to $75;
 springers, $50 to $60.

Sheep, ewes, $6 to $6.50; bucks and culla,
 $5 to $5.50. Lambs, $7.25 to $7.50.

Hogs, f.o.b., $9.40 to $9.65.
 Calves, $1.50 to $10.

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she would

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day; and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

Fancy Hems and Featherstitching on Sheer Summer Gowns.

Many women who are fond of needlework do not possess the skill to work some of the embroidery designs that are now so fashionable, but almost any one with a little practice can do feather stitching neatly and rapidly.

With this stitch you can secure many effective designs with very little labor, and it is an ideal way to finish the top of hems on any sheer material.

When French knots, "birds' eyes" and eyelets are combined with the feather stitching lovely effects are possible.

then dividing it exactly in half. Now lay these two half circles on the material end to end and draw a fine line around the outer curved edge, keeping the straight edge even with the edge of the hem.

Repeat this process all the way along the hem and do the stitching over the mark.

Very fine mercerized cotton is used for this work. White material worked in pale colors is beautiful, and for variety you may do the featherstitching in one color and the row of daisies or eyelets of a contrasting shade.

Fagoting is sometimes used instead of the featherstitching, and with a little practice you will be able to design different patterns for yourself, suiting the work to the need of your material or the article being made. Quite different, though within the

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

MEN regard helpless women as young girls regard babies—very sweet as long as they don't have to take care of them.

Some girls choose a husband as they do a book—by the title.

Any man is happy after a good dinner, but it takes a compliment to cheer up a woman.

A man fears he may get what's coming to him, a woman fears she won't.

Some women are so critical that they even test a compliment to see whether it could possibly fit anybody else.

It is hard to be true to a man who can't be true to himself.

The trouble about lies is you never know when they are around.

Some women think themselves such good company that they never get lonesome.

A man who has an upright character seldom worries about his reputation.

Love may drive a man crazy, but it seldom drives him to work.

Skip the Trifles.

Don't worry over little things
That trouble and annoy.
Don't let the trifles in your path
Put dampers on your joy.
Perhaps the microscopic ills
The harder seem to bear,
But that's because of man sized ones
You do not get your share.

If over woes of no account
You fuss and fret and stew,
Make ungrammatical remarks
Until the air is blue,
You could not give your feelings vent,
I'm very much afraid,
If you should break an arm or leg
Or crack your shoulder blade.

If all the language in the shop
You use to tell your woe
When you have lost a handkerchief
Or stubbed your little toe,
What sort of words and phrases then
Will there be left on tap
When you have fallen from a house
Or lost a paying snap?

So, taking all things in account,
Those persons who are wise
Will let the fesser bumps go by
And just philosophize.
By doing thus for many years
It may assist you some
To treat the larger, harder jolts
The same way when they come.

Annoying.

"Just my luck," exclaimed the impatient man, biting at the end of his cigar savagely.

"Bad luck?"

"Listen. I just bought a new umbrella."

"And lost it?"

"No; had a chance to pick up three within an hour afterward."

Swarthmore, Penn. — "For years I suffered untold agonies during one period of two years of hemorrhages, doctors told me I would have to undergo an operation, but I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now as good as new."

Change of course cannot praise your Vegetable Compound too highly. Every woman should have it at that time. I recommend it to all young and old for female troubles. EMILY SUMMERSGILL, Swarthmore, Penn.

THE PILFERER

TELL you have stolen kit. You never know what. And I am told that this is a crime both prime and ancient. Although this form of pilfering is now a ban is unduly to miss it is a blunder; To snatch it is a treat.

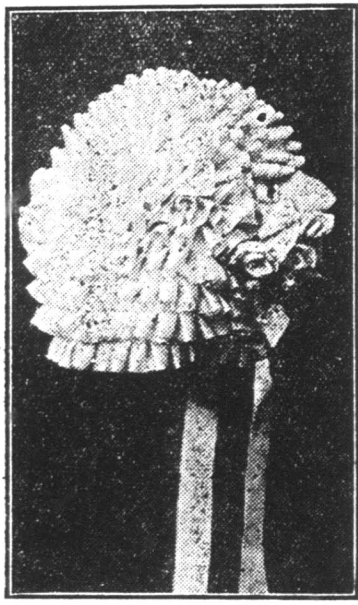

The man who boldly rushes aside objection brushes, may cause some lovely blunder upon the cheek to flame; But, though the girl, prote may hint at his arresting, He knows that she is jesting. And taking part the blarney.

This pleasure sublimated, is not, as has been stated, For one whose nerve is raw. At something less than a fellow who is lacking, In fear of slaps or sackings, Is he who picks the smacking.

When French knots, "birds' eyes" and eyelets are combined with the feather stitching lovely effects are possible.

Such borders are particularly attractive on summer gowns, but can be used on anything from the finest lingerie to curtains, heavy cushions and table covers.

Birds' eyes are made by drawing the thread through to the right side of the material of the hem, then holding it down with the left thumb (as you would for buttonhole stitching), inserting the needle in the hole it has just passed through and taking a small stitch, pulling the thread through until the loop formed is the same length as the stitch you have taken; then take a stitch at the outer point to hold the loop securely.

BABY BONNET MADE OF RIBBON.

Dainty little daisies can be made of the birds' eye stitch by making the first stitch long enough for the petal. After taking the second stitch draw the needle through the first hole made, which will be the center of the flower.

Then make a second petal, pulling the needle through the center hole to form each petal.

A line of these little flowers placed just inside the feather stitching on the edge of the hem will make a delightful finish to any gown. Featherstitching applied in scallops, with a tiny daisy at the top of each or in the center of each scallop, is another dainty way to trim a hem. Perfect scallops are easily made by drawing a perfect circle on the stiff cardboard and cutting it out, little practice you will be able to design different patterns for yourself, suiting the work to the need of your material or the article being made. Quite different, though within the realm of needlework, is the making of a baby's cap of ribbon like the pretty little piece of head covering seen in the illustration. Loops of inch wide white satin ribbon are bunched, arranged in loops very evenly over the usual cap foundation of white silk. A lace frill frames the baby face.

Boiled Salad Dressing.

The following boiled dressing is very nice with tomato jelly, fish salads and fresh green salad herbs and with a bit of onion or watercress makes a delicious filling for sandwiches. It may also be used on bread or rolls when a butter boycott has been called: Beat two eggs together, add a tiny pinch of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, half a scant teaspoonful of ground mustard and half a cupful of milk. Mix well and then stir in a quarter of a cupful of vinegar. Cook the mixture until it thickens, taking care to stir it constantly to prevent curdling. Upon removing from the fire let it cool and then add a few drops of olive oil.

Pasteboard Pyramids.

Quite the newest conceit in imported place favors has appeared from abroad in the form of miniature pasteboard pyramids with tiny flowering plants seeming to have grown in them. The decoration of the holder simulates porcelain, with a color note to harmonize with that of the artificial blossoms surmounting it. A set of these favors in yellow, for instance, if in accord with the chosen color scheme for the table setting, will give a far prettier effect than a favor introducing its color solidly. With these novelties there come tiny white place cards to be slipped among the flowers.

On Trust.

"I trust that I am a person of intelligence."
 "Ah, I see!"
 "See what?"
 "What an elevating thing faith must be."

Not For Himself Alone.

"Had any leap year proposals?"
 "Can't say that I have."
 "You're slow."
 "My auto has received a couple."

Progress.

O woman, with the ballot
 To help produce your curves
 We fear you'll use the mallet
 Where now the hammer serves!

"No; had a chance to pick up three within an hour afterward."

Wears Them Out.

"She has a way of refusing the men without offending them."
 "How does she do it?"
 "Refers them to her father."
 "And does he refuse them?"
 "He is guarded by four office boys, and they never get to him."

Knew What to Expect.

"I am perfectly crazy to meet the new boarder."
 "I'm not."
 "Why?"
 "Miss Higgins says he has a perfectly grand intellect."

Two of a Kind.

"Why did Ethel break her engagement with Jack?"
 "She got tired of him, and now Jack is engaged to Sally."
 "I wonder why she accepted him?"
 "She got tired too."
 "Of what?"
 "Waiting for somebody else."

The Modern Miss.

"Percy proposed to me last night. I bet nobody ever proposed to you."
 "Hub! You know what happened to Percy afterward?"
 "Naw. What did?"
 "His ma spanked him."

And a Good Hand.

"A cat may look at a king."
 "But it needn't expect the king to reciprocate."
 "No?"
 "Not unless the cat is a kitty and he has a good nerve."

More Likely.

"Father is secretly taking boxing lessons."
 "What can his object be?"
 "Maybe he intends to be the white man's hope."
 "Yes, or perhaps he has to fire the cook."

Is not, as has been stated, For one whose nerve is ragged. At something less than p At fellow who is lacking In fear of slaps or sacking Is he who picks the smack From out the cherry jar.

THE SAMARITANS.

A Meeting and an Interrupted Conference.

By C. B. LEWIS.

Miss Duella Mims, as her cards read,
was an elocutionist and quite willing to help others over the same road for pay. So long as her ambition was kept within bounds and her prices were not too steep her native town of 5,000 inhabitants supplied a fair number of pupils, and the local press now and then referred to her in a way that was pleasing.

One unfortunate day Miss Mims decided that elocution such as hers should have no limits. The village boy who fell into the frog pond decided that if it was good for him it ought to be good for the whole United States. Miss Mims reasoned after the same fashion.
She collected her bills, packed her trunk and set out for the metropolis,
and never was a young woman more sanguine.

In a week she was surprised. In a month she was tired. In two months she had decided to drop elocution and look for a place as a typist and stenographer. Her mind was fully made up on this point, and yet she could not let go of elocution with a bang. She must part from it by degrees and make the parting less painful.

Miss Mims sat at the open window of her boarding house and dallied with elocution. In her well modulated voice she went over three or four of her choicest gems and then brought out
"The Wanderer."

She had always made a hit in this.
It was about a lovely girl who left her village home for a great city, and after using up all her money and pawning
everything that her uncle would advance on she committed suicide, and the landlady found her dead when she went in to collect her week's rent in advance.

In elocuting this pathetic appeal Miss Mims had to simulate discouragement, sorrow, grief, appeal, resignation and several other things calculated to arouse human interest, and she had an audience without knowing it.

On the floor above was a young man who had been in the boarding house almost as long as she had, but they had not been introduced and had taken very little interest in each other. He was the audience on this night. Miss Mims' voice floated up to him, and he listened and became interested. Gradually he found his sympathies aroused. From what he could make out she was clean discouraged and ready for the deadly fumes of charcoal. She was even hungry for food at that moment, and there was no one in the great city to whom she could turn.

The young man was deeply affected.
Here was a case right under his nose
where sympathy and cash were required, and only that evening he had
dodged the landlady when he came in.
He was perturbed and upset for a few minutes, but finally reasoned it out that formed the two lunches into a trust.

As they ate and drank they learned each other's history. When they had finished she asked:

"How long have you been trying to place your play before the public?"

"Five years," he sighed. "How long have you been trying to get the people
of this town to elocute?"

Blind Lighthouses.

The French government is about to establish a system of what mariners call blind lighthouses. This revolution in maritime signaling consists in the use of Hertzian waves, and it is believed it will prove of far more lasting value than lights, since it is equally effective in foggy weather, when the usual lights cannot be seen. Indeed, some experts look forward to the gradual extinction of coast lights and expect that ships will soon get their bearings from the ticking of wireless receivers. The great difficulty to be overcome is that of establishing direction, enabling a navigator to determine accurately from which particular station the message comes. It is stated that a practicable scheme has now been formulated. The French light-house authorities will shortly make experimental trials at certain stations in the channel.—New York Sun.

here was a case right under his nose
where sympathy and cash were required, and only that evening he had
dodged the landlady when he came in.
He was perturbed and upset for a few
minutes, but finally reasoned it out that if the poor girl stuck to her program
and died it would save her being disappointed in love in the future.

When a long silence had followed her tearful appeal to heaven he brought out a manuscript and began to read aloud. He was no elocutionist. He might have been one had he not become a dramatist at an early age. The manuscript in his hands was a play written by himself. It is needless to give it a name, but it may be said to have been pathetic. It had a hero, and the hero went through trouble enough to swamp a canalboat within five miles of Troy. He kept hoping and hoping, but it was no use. As soon as he came in sight of a good thing it vanished.
He hung on and hung on until the beef trust made its last raise, and then he starved to death with the same dignity
that he had lived.

What the dramatist was reading was the soliloquy of the hero when he had abandoned all hope and decided that mince pie was no longer for him. The reverie of the elocutionist below was broken by his reading and raving. She listened, and tears of pity came to her eyes. She had thought the world was harsh to her, but here was a worse case than hers. She hadn't gone hungry yet, but here was a young man literally starving to death. She had heard him say that even the mice had abandoned his room and that, unable to find another morsel of food, the cricket no longer sang for him.

Miss Mims did what a practical young woman should do under the circumstances. The hour was not late,
and she put on her hat and went downstairs and hunted up a delicatessen
store and bought some smoked tongue and crackers. These would keep the spark of life in the young man over night, and next day things might turn for the better with him.

When the dramatist had concluded reading his hero's soliloquy—it was the millionth reading—his thoughts turned once more to the young woman below.
He still had a couple of dollars left,
and he could not see her die for want of sustenance. In handing in the sustenance—he would also band in his sympathies and encouragement. If he found her obstinately determined to die he might even promise her a leading part in his comedy drama when it was finally put on the road.

He did the only sensible thing he had done since he spelled down a country school and got the idea therefrom that he was born for a dramatist. He put on his hat and went down and went to a saloon. He bought a bottle of beer, and from the remains of the free lunch he gathered up some cheese and pretzels. Beer, cheese and pretzels,
as he had read in a medical magazine,
will keep a young woman alive for a whole week after she has determined to die.

The two Samaritans did not happen
to meet at the door of the boarding-house or on the stairs. They went to their rooms for a moment and then emerged on the errand of mercy. They met in the lower hall. The dramatist was the first to speak.

"My dear Miss Mims—you see I have heard your name," he began—"I have learned quite by accident that you are

have you been trying to get the people
of this town to elocute?"

"Two months," and she sighed as well.

"Miss Mims," said the dramatist as he sought to take her hand, "I have known you but a brief half hour, but during that time"—

"Yes!"

Then the landlady appeared and said that altogether too much gas was being used throughout the house and it must be cut off in the halls; also that it was against the rules of the house to leave cracker crumbs around.

Next morning Miss Mims got a place
with a hardware firm, and two days later Mr. Davis was seen bareheaded and with a pencil over his ear in front of a shoe store where they sold manufacturers' samples only—every pair warranted as represented or money refunded. The elocution, the dramatic, the sentiment, were there, and the landlady is expecting an announcement
any evening.

Not Much as Boys.

When parents get discouraged over the lack of study and the frequent eccentricities that their boys manifest,
or even over their physical misfortunes or poverty, they ought to find hope and consolation in the thought that Isaac Watts was constantly scolded for his absolute indifference to books and boys' sports. Charles Darwin showed such an eccentric tendency to absent-mindedness that on one of his lonely tramps he walked off an embankment and nearly lost his life. Ralph Waldo Emerson was a hopeless dreamer.
Moses and Demosthenes were fearful stammerers. Abraham Lincoln, Elihu Burritt, Charles Dickens and Andrew Carnegie were the poorest of poor children. Anthony Trollope, the writer, was hopelessly shy and the butt of his school. Audubon, of bird fame, was put down by all his elders as a fool.
Caesar and Napoleon were epileptics.
Oliver Goldsmith was a hopeless sloven, and Thoreau was adjudged by every one to be a crank. The queer boy does not always grow to be the man of no worth.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Pride and Wealth.

Wealth built a splendid mansion and invited Pride to inspect it. Pride came gladly, but found fault with the house
and everything in it from cellar to gar-ret.

"Why," said he, "Competence has as good carpets and furniture, and Well-
to-do has more costly draperies and pictures and a much more elegant main staircase. Furthermore, I see you have consulted Convenience in regard to some of the arrangements, and this I can construe only as a bitter insult to myself."

To placate Pride Wealth sold his house for a fraction of its value and built a far more costly one. This time Luxury and not Convenience was consulted, and the result pleased Pride so well that he took up permanent quarters in the mansion. He invited in his comrades, Vanity, Ostentation and Prodigality. Wealth was the only one who could not see that the house he

Floods and War Make the Yangtze Valley a Horror Spot.

It is difficult to bring home to the American public an adequate realization of the awful conditions in the famine stricken district. Thousands of men, women and children were shivering in their rags, gaunt, hungry and hopeless. Women, so faint they could scarcely stand, were seen carrying dead babies in their arms, the snow stained with blood that oozed from their poor, crippled feet. For miles around the trees were denuded of bark,
and the ground was dug up in every direction for roots, the only food many of the sufferers had tasted for days.

The latest floods were the worst experienced in years. Almost the entire province of Anhui has been submerged
for some time, and more than 95
per cent of the crops were destroyed.
The loss in Anhui province alone was terrific. In a single district over 100, 000 acres of rice fields were destroyed
in one day, and in a neighboring district, a few days later, 20,000 more acres were swept clean. Other districts met a similar fate, and thousands of thrifty farmers have become homeless beggars.

What little was left by the flood was taken by the soldiers of the revolution, and the Yangtze valley swarms with starving refugees, fleeing from the homes of their ancestors in search of work and food. Neither is available, as conditions throughout the Yangtze valley cannot possibly improve for the next four months.—George Mooser in Leslie's.

The Kaiser's Castles.

The kaiser, who recently celebrated his fifty-third birthday, is the possessor of nearly ninety estates, the biggest of which has an area of 250,000 acres. But this is not all. Emperor Wilhelm holds the record as the owner of castles, which now number close on sixty. In Potsdam alone he possesses thirteen, while one built for his majesty at Posen, in Prussia, took over five years to erect and cost £250, 000. Another castle, in Alsace, which had fallen into ruin, he had restored at a cost of £60,000. But, not content with that, last year he bought a villa in Corfu, built for the late empress of Austria. The kaiser seldom resides in his castles. They are merely kept up for political reasons.

THE MIGHTY CODFISH.

It Thrives In Spite of Wholesale Capture For Centuries.

The cod is probably the most prolific of all sea fish, though its habitat does not extend over as large an area as other species. The cod is found only in northern waters and will live and thrive only in certain temperatures. Some day, owing to the wonderful asset which Newfoundland possesses in her cod fishery, she is destined to be the great fish depot of the world.

It is not alone on the great "banks," many miles off her coast, that cod are found in countless millions, but around the whole island—on the "ledges" and "grounds" off the capes and promontories that jut into the Atlantic as well as on the Labrador coast for a stretch of 1,000 miles.

In these regions you require no hatcheries to aid the wonderful fecundity of nature. Indeed, it is doubtful if you require any laws or regulations to protect these fisheries unless it be in the shoal waters of the bay.

Notwithstanding that for 300 years the fisheries of these waters have been prosecuted by the rival fishermen of two hemispheres, the largest catch of cod ever taken on the Newfoundland and Labrador coasts was that secured in 1909, the yield being estimated in weight at 1,800,000 quintals, or 201,000,000 pounds, to which may be added 200,000 quintals—the quantity locally consumed in Newfoundland during and after the fishing season.

The value of the fish alone, without any regard to the byproducts—oil, roes, skin, offal, etc.—is $10,000,000.—Wide World Magazine.

Long War In Morocco.

Hon. James Pitt Mabey, chief commissioner of the Railway Commissioners for came of U. E. Loyalist st was born nearly 53 years November 5, 1859, in the tow Rowan, in Norfolk County, was the eldest son of Col. S Mabey and Fannie Leaton.

His early education was the St. Thomas high school which he matriculated at the University of Toronto at the age of 21. He studied law and was called to the bar at the early age of 21.

After five years law practice he removed to Listowel where he put in eighteen years of his profession. He made a Q.C. in October, 1898, and was a member of the Law Society. After leaving Stratford he came to Toronto where he became a partner in the law firm of Beatty, I & Co., practicing for ten years in this city.

Before his elevation to the bench in 1905, Mr. Mabey had been a Liberal and a vigorous campaigner in 1904 contested, unsuccessfully, the constituency of North York in the House of Commons in the interest.

On November 21, 1905, he was appointed one of the judges of the Court Bench for Ontario Bench division, and immediately began to attract attention by his brusque and straightforward getting to the root of their cases.

In 1905 he was appointed a member of the International Inland Navigation Commission, and in 1907 he labored as one of the commissioners for the consolidation of the statutes of Ontario.

When Judge Killam, then commissioner of the Dominion way Board, died early in 1908, one who had followed the work of that commission declared would be next to impossible to place him. But the man was there and it was Judge Mabey, who was pointed to the office, who Killam held till the date of his death, March 23, 1908.

In religion the late Judge was an Anglican. He was married in 1884, to Marie S. T. Mount Williams, Ont. He has two sons, Lionel, and one daughter, who, with the widow, survive. He was a member of the Rideau Club, Ottawa, and the Toronto Club, Toronto.

Ottawa Mourns Loss.

Ottawa, May 7.—News of the death of Chairman Mabey of the Railway Board was received in Ottawa with the greatest regret. He was exceedingly popular personally, and a member of the Government voiced what is a general opinion when he stated that the judge was probably the best man in the country for the position which he had filled. It is recognized that great difficulty will be experienced in finding a successor possessing, in anything like the same degree, his peculiar qualifications. His rulings have been courteous but firm, his method of dealing with the cases, expeditious, and the soundness of his judgments is indicated in the fact that they were rarely appealed from, and even more rarely varied.

PAPERS ON BODY.

Valuable Documents Found In C. M. Hays' Pockets.

Halifax, May 7.—The Minia's toll of dead when the cable ship came in yesterday showed seventeen bodies found and two buried at sea.

The first body picked up was that of C. M. Hays, and the last that of Thomas A. Mullins, one of the stewards. On Mr. Hays' body were found estimates for future construction on the Grand Trunk Pacific. Vice-President Kelly received these.

Two bodies were buried at sea—one unidentified and the other a fireman. The body of Mr. Hays was found several miles from any other.

Burial permits were issued yesterday for C. M. Hays' interment at Montreal, and that of Sigward H. Moen, in Norway.

The Mackay-Bennett brought a hundred and ninety bodies, and the Minia fifteen, a total of two hundred and five. Of these 137 have been shipped abroad or buried in Halifax, leaving 68 still at the morgue. Relatives are in communication in regard to most of these, and while the White Star people are not absolutely sure in regard to all of them they are as respects by far the greater number.

The body with the largest amount of funds was that of Col. Emil Brandels of Omaha, Neb., who had $16,600. This included letters of credit for $10,000, checks for $6,000, bank notes for $400, and a 1,000 franc note.

The funds in the hands of the Provincial Government taken from the bodies of victims is $70,000.

The Montmagny sailed at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The White Star officials and shipping men here believe that the Government steamer will likely succeed in recovering a large number of bodies.

Not One Hebrew Body.

Halifax, May 7.—The remarkable fact developed at the Titanic morgue last night that the ten bodies taken by Hebrews from the Fairview Cemetery and removed to the Hebrew burying-ground were all Christians, either Roman Catholics or Protestants. The White Star Line had telegrams from friends regarding all of them, and the fact that they were Christians was established to the satisfaction of the local Hebrew Association. The bodies will now be sent back to the Fairview Cemetery.

REFORMS ARE NEEDED

Mimico Industrial School Not Up to the Mark.

Special Commission Appointed to Investigate Charges of Cruelty to Boy, Finds That Cottages Are Unclean and Whole Institution Is Overcrowded—Only One-Third Mentally Bright—Parole Needed.

Toronto, May 7.—The report of Dr. R. W. Bruce Smith and R. C. Harris, the commissioners appointed by the Ontario Government to investigate conditions at the Victoria Industrial School at Mimico, was made public yesterday.

The inquiry arose out of the charges of Wilbert Spain, a boy who declared that he had been handcuffed, starved and cruelly beaten by the superintendent.

The commissioners recommend: That the action already taken by the board of management of the Victoria Industrial School to abolish mechanical restraint, such as handcuffs, be commended.

That as large a number as possible of the inmates, probably 100, should be discharged on probation as soon as homes can be provided for them.

That commitment of boys to the industrial school should be regulated in such a manner as to prevent overcrowding and to permit classification, with a view to as early parole as is practicable.

"The evidence shows that for many years handcuffs have been used as a punishment for boys running away from this school, and the evidence given on the last day of the investigation makes it clear that the class of boys for whose custodial care the institution is responsible, is one which often requires the strictest attention. As soon as the evidence was taken the board of management directed that the use of handcuffs be at once abolished.

"The institution has, in spite of many disadvantages, done an excellent work, and cruel treatment of the boys has been the exception and not the rule."

"There are about fifteen building, of which five are cottages, containing the dormitories, school and recreation rooms for the boys. These are not in a good state of repair and are in the main unclean and show evidence of lack of care and management.

"The grounds are greatly in need of new sidewalks and drainage. The dormitories are altogether too crowded, and the beds so close together that the air cannot be kept pure. One basement dormitory had 35 beds, which in such a room only 16 beds should be allowed. The dining-room was found quite unsuitable and unclean. The congregate system which permits 300 inmates to partake of their meals together in one room cannot be regarded as satisfactory.

"The original intention of the school, to deal with truant boys and prevent them becoming criminals, the commissioners point out, has somewhat been lost sight of and "boys with vicious propensities are now brought into contact with others whose worst faults had been largely on account of improper home training, but who have never been charged with a criminal offence.

"Everything was left to the superintendent, and the school, which should never have had more than 200 boys, at times had as many as 325 in residence.

"One-third of the boys are declared to be bright mentally. These should be discharged on probation as soon as there is promise of reformation, the commissioners say. Nearly one-third are of vicious instincts. The grading of these and their ultimate discharge on parole are recommended.

"In future," the report continues, "there should be more discrimination in sending boys to an industrial school. The last resort of the juvenile court should be the industrial school. Efficient, faithful probation or parole officers can do more for these boys than any other agency; they would find homes and work for them, and regularly visit them, not to spy upon them, but to help them."

DEATHS

VANDEVOORT—Suddenly, on Monday, May 6th, 1912, at her late residence, 277 Sherbourne street, Toronto, Mary Jones, beloved wife of the late J. W. Vandevort. Mr. C. W. Vandevort, South Napanee, is a son of the deceased.

JAMES McKEOWN GONE HOME.

Born Feb. 22, 1835, died April 19, 1912.

Triumphantly and peacefully he passed away in the early morning. Born 77 years ago in mid-ocean on the ship his parents had taken passage in from Ireland to Canada. Twenty-two years later he married Margaret J. Hughes. Four children were born, three of them dying in infancy. The surviving one, Mrs. Alfred McCutcheon, of Roblin, together with his wife and grandchild, May, were in constant attendance throughout his last illness. His faithful wife bending o'er him, seeing him laboring for breath said, "James the Lord will come and relieve your suffering." "Blessed Lord, Blessed Lord" he exclaimed aloud then calmly folded his hands and in a few minutes had "gone home." During his illness he frequently used the expression "I'll soon be going home," or "I'm soon going home." Besides his wife and daughter he leaves to mourn their gentle, kind-hearted grandpa, five grand-children, Fred, Frank, May, Lillian and Daisy, three great grand-children, also five brothers and four sisters, deceased being the eldest. The brothers are John and William, of Belleville, Angus, of Victoria, B. C., and Samuel and Alexander, of Croydon. The sisters, Mrs. Robt. McCracken, Mrs. J. McCutcheon, and Mary and Ellen, of Croydon. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Horton, assisted by Rev. Ralph, in the Methodist church, Roblin, after which the remains were interred in Roblin cemetery till the angels trump shall sound and times shall be no more.

Miss Georgia Goodwin, of New York, fed her uncle's horse an apple and the animal swallowed her diamond engagement ring with it.
